WAR RESOLUTION
The Flood-Martin war resolution was still being debated in the Senate when the Dispatch went to press Thursday afternoon it was believed that by evening it would be adopted and the United States officially at war with Germany. Following is the resolution:
"Joint resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the Imperial German government and the United States and making provisions to prosecute the same:
"Whereas, the recent acts of the Imperial German government are acts of war against the government and people of the United States;
"Resolved, by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled that the state of war between the United States and the Imperial German government which has thus been thrust upon the United States is hereby formally declared; and
"That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to take immediate steps not only to put the country in a thorough state of defense but also to exert all its power and employ all of its resources to carry on war against the Imperial German government and to bring the conflict to a successful termination."

A Word to Mothers
There seems to be more than the usual number of children suffering from measles, whooping cough and other children's disease this spring. Do not neglect any cold, for a cold weakens the system and makes a child more liable to attack of more serious ailments. Foley's Honey and Tar relieves coughs, colds and croup. F. A. Morris, Canfield, adv.

TIME FOR RESOLUTIONS

Easter is the Season to Start Anew and Stop Worrying Over Little Things That Can't Be Helped.

THERE'S just one thing for resolutions to thrive, and that is at the Easter season, when everything is starting anew. There's something in the very atmosphere that strengthens puny, timid resolutions.

For instance, suppose that you resolve to stop worrying over little things that can't be helped, and then wake up on the morning of the day you had planned to make a lettuce bed and put out your spring flowers, to find a vigorous snowstorm in full session. Be still for a minute and listen to that rebid in your neighbor's cherry trees, piping shrilly: "Here! here! With you—with you—with you!"

To be sure he is with us, the blessed dash of crime and joy, and he will save the day for that resolution. Suppose you've resolved to stop grumbling, and then the brick masons and the carpenters next door throw things on your tiny rose garden, and trample your grass into the mud. That resolution would snap like glass in January, but just as it is being strained to the limit now, a robin calls to you from the telegraph wire overhead: "Cheer up—cheer up—cheer up! And you just can't help cheering up."

Oh, you get all sorts of encouragement in the resolution business at this season! If you resolve to grow in mind and heart and soul, there's the example of the green grass that rises in spite of rude, trampling feet, and the birds that sing in spite of the beating spring rains, and the flowers that bloom because of rains and buffeting winds. And think of the help you will get from the Easter music! It is so sweet, so tender and glad and triumphant! How could you help being better and stronger and truer after hearing it? It's the sweetest, finest season of the whole year—the Easter season, with its message of rising and growing and doing and being. New Year's resolutions are broken, or even nickered here and there, why not get a fresh set when you get your new Easter clothes, and when you array your body, put some of the newness of life into your mind and heart and soul? And even if we haven't new Easter clothes and a precious lot of us won't have—why can't we deck our minds and hearts and souls a bit more lavishly, so that the steady, happy light shining through our eyes from within will prove to the world that Easter is not just a time for outward adornment, why not try making just a few new resolutions at the blessed Easter time?

ANOTHER TREE DOPER

Bore a hole in the trunk of the tree, slanting downward, on the south side as the sun draws the sap to that side of the tree. Don't bore towards the heart, but keep in the sap wood.

For large trees bore an inch hole from 4 to 5 inches deep; then insert a tablespoonful of the powder. Small trees should be treated in proportion, down to a half inch hole and a tea spoonful of the powder. Then plug the hole with dry wood or cork.

All large trees should be treated in two places.

This refers to "Thompson's Scale Cure and Germ Destroyer," which seems to be the latest tree dope. Agents for this stuff are reported in northern Ohio and Michigan. They claim that this stuff "purifies the sap" and puts the tree in a fine, healthy condition. Disease, borers, scale and the rest "can't exist where this tree powder is used." We have exposed these tree powder humbugs over and over again, and it can hardly be possible that any readers of The R. N. Y. will invest in such things.

We know, though, how plausible these agents are, and how they play upon human nature. One of them might go into a country home and tell how the doctor, by giving a small injection of some drug, under the skin, can quiet a severe pain. He offers that as proof that his tree powder will do the same. Or he will take some of the sun drawn sap, heat it to soak his feet in hot water. The pain is quieted—and there is further evidence for the tree powder. There is no use arguing with these fellows or talking with them. Their so-called remedy is opposed to the laws of plant life and is understood by the best authorities we have, and there is absolutely no sense in throwing your money away on such stuff.—Rural New Yorker.
